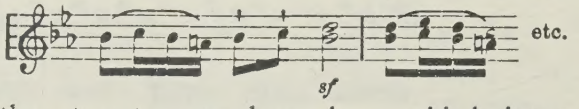
Notes to Beethoven's Concerto in E flat

By FRANZ KULLAK

The present edition of this Fifth Concerto is the result of renewed revision. Besides comparison with the Autograph of the score (in the Royal Library, Berlin), we have collated the text with three different impressions of the original edition published by Breitkopf & Härtel, register [running number of publication] 1613, which we shall call A, B and C respectively. All three impressions were taken from the same plates; though C was provided with a new title-page. Impressions A and B* are quite similar externally; but in B a considerable number of errors are corrected, these errors being, in fact, of such a kind (to judge by the autograph of the score, at least) that they ought properly to have been corrected before the publication of A. As for the other corrections contained in B, there can hardly be a doubt, judging from external and internal evidence†, that they are directly traceable to the composer's own intentions. These changes, of course, are likewise to be found in C. Moreover, we give in the present edition as complete a list as possible of the differences between the Autograph and the Original Editions, and also between these latter, omitting, of course, mere mistakes in writing and engraving. Here we shall take note of one special case, for which there was no room in the foot-notes. The following passage [on p. 10, etc.] has (at least with regard to the non-staccato notes) the following notation in all the original editions:

In the Autograph, the slurs in the third measure (at N. B.) are altered and prolonged by very heavy strokes, followed in our text and other recent editions. In fact, the original slurring appears to have been [Autogr. (former notation)]:



the staccato may have been added later. Touching the staccato we should also observe, that the original editions do not admit of a consistent discrimination between the signs · · · · and ' ' ' ' The former appear only in isolated instances. A few dots in the Adagio proved to be dashes in the Autograph.

Finally, with regard to the Tutti, it will be of interest to learn that they are indicated, in the piano-part of the Autograph, and similarly in the Original Editions, by figured basses with large note-heads, together with melody-notes and occasional harmony-notes in smaller notes. The Tutti-arrangements in the present edition were made by the editor after a Breitkopf & Härtel score in large 8vo.

Berlin, 1882. F. K.

* Their title, mostly in italics, reads literally: "Grand / Concerto / Pour le Pianoforte / avec Accompagnement / de l'Orchestre / composé et dedié / à Son Altesse Imperiale / Roudolphe / Archi-Duc d'Autriche etc. / par / L. V. Beethoven / Propriété des Éditeurs / Ouev. [sic!] 73.————Pr. 4 Rthlr. / à Leipsic / Chez Breitkopf & Härtel."—Compare herewith Nottebohm's Thematic Catalogue of Beethoven's compositions (2nd Ed.), in which the title of the edition of May, 1811, is given word for word like the above (though omitting statement of price, and slightly deviating in orthography and punctuation). As to time of publication, also cf. the "Intelligenzblatt zur Allg. Mus. Zeitung" of 1811. In No. II (February) — the Concerto is advertised to appear "shortly." In No. VI (May 22), it is announced as published; whereas in No. V (May 8), no mention is made of it.—The title of impression C (printed in the forties) begins with the words: "Cinquième Concerto."—A still later edition by Moscheles, distinguished as a "nouvelle édition" (Breitkopf & Härtel), has the register 7738, and appeared toward the end of the forties.

† Cf. a fragment of a letter written by Beethoven and printed in Nohl's "Neue Briefe Beethovens" (Stuttgart, 1867) as No. 60; also the composer's letter of May 6 to the publishers, printed by Thayer (Life of Beethoven, iii, 166).

Rondo (acc. to Czerny, ♩. = 96)
Allegro.

(1) This mark, "semplice poco tenuto," together with the appertinent holds, is omitted in the Autogr. In the next measure, editions B and C contain between the lines, below (and belonging to?) the ff, the words "ma non troppo." In A this addition is lacking; indeed, there was no room for it in the corrected plate after "Allegro." In the Autograph there stood originally, after "Rondo Allegro" the words "non tanto," which were later crossed out (probably by Beethoven himself) with pencil.

(2) "sf," though perhaps wholly justifiable on practical grounds, is given by none of our sources in the Solo, for the principal theme; but is found in the arrangement (p. 41), and in the Tutti.

(3) This addition, lacking in the original editions, is found on the extreme lower margin of the Autograph.
